John's Journal

The view from the Vicar's study

Quiet, please

It would be easy to conclude that the modern world doesn't do silence any more. It seems that almost every shop plays muzak; earbuds proliferate; we hear a loop of music when a call's on hold; and a surprising fact is that tinnitus affects 10% of the population and rising. It's almost as if we're scared of silence – and we all know that feeling when conversation palls, and we reckon someone should say something!

So silence is often seen as negative, an absence of sound. But silence is golden, so the proverb goes. Better to keep the mouth closed than put a foot in it! And whereas noise pollution is known to have a detrimental effect on health, a study has revealed that silence can actually lower blood pressure, boost the body's immune system, improve brain activity, decrease stress and improve the regulation of hormones. So it's worth a try!

It's also worth thinking about all those monks and nuns over the centuries who took vows of silence. They knew that, just as light pollution prevents us seeing stars, so silence can help us hear what we need to hear. For instance:

Silence increases awareness. Try sitting in a quiet place, and being quiet – and you'll soon be aware that it isn't quiet at all. There may be distant sounds which connect you to your surroundings, such as a clock ticking, birds singing, traffic – and as you become more self-aware, you'll notice your heartbeat, your breathing and more. We can turn our thoughts to thanking God for where we are and who we are.

Silence is the start of a prayer adventure. As we pray in our thoughts, we can expect God's answers in our thoughts – if we even let our thoughts be silent, so that God can 'get a word in edgeways'! A tip: don't try to empty your mind; instead ask God to fill it. That's far more positive!

Silence builds community. You know that a couple who know each other well don't need to be talking all the time, and some of the loveliest times we can have together are silent times. It's when we're most comfortable in the company of friends and neighbours that a hug, a smile or a kind gesture says more than words ever could. And if we do it rather than say it, they know we mean it.

So may I encourage you to do that positive thing – set aside quiet times in your diary. And may the Lord reward you with His still, small voice (1 Kings 19:12).

Be still, and know that I am God (Psalm 46:10).

Yours in Jesus

Silent prayer: a guide

'When you pray, go into your room, close the door, and pray to your Father, who is unseen. And your Father, who sees what is done in secret, will reward you.' (Matthew 6:6)

'In quietness and trust shall be your strength' (Isaiah 30:15)

'Be silent, and I will teach you wisdom' (Job 33:33)

'Your beauty should be that of your inner self, the unfading beauty of a quiet and gentle spirit, which is of great worth in God's sight.' (1 Peter 3:3-4)

Do try this at home!

- Find a quiet place and quiet time, when you are less likely to be disturbed
- Be quietly aware of where and how you are: seated comfortably;
- Breathing slowly; feeling peaceful, even perhaps with aches and pains
- Ask God to fill you so full with his Spirit that all your crowded thoughts, tasks and cares are covered over
- Choose and read a short passage from the Bible – perhaps one from last Sunday, when it was explained in a sermon
- Many people find it helpful to repeat The Jesus Prayer: 'Lord Jesus Christ, Son of God, have mercy on me, a sinner'
- Worship God, telling him what you know of Him – His almighty, all-loving, all-knowing nature - and expect Him to respond into your thoughts
- Thank God for all that He is to you, offer all that you are to Him, and then just enjoy your relationship with Him
- Offer all your needs and desires to God by saying the Lord's Prayer
- As your prayer time draws to a close, receive from God those responsibilities which you know He wants you to have, and pray for His powerful presence in each of them
- Finally, thank God for his assurance that He is always with you (Matthew 28:20).

'My house shall be a house of prayer'
(Isaiah 56:7; Matthew 21:13)

Revd John Chandler to retire

It has been announced that Revd John is to retire in October. This was planned when he was appointed to the Parish in 2014, but we are so very sorry to see him leave. He has worked tirelessly in our Benefice and will be a hard act to follow.

He will lead our Harvest Services on 13th October, and his final day in the Benefice will be Sunday 20th October. All Villagers and Church members are invited to a Farewell Service in Little Horkesley Church at 4pm on that day, with refreshments to follow.

The service will be led by the Bishop of Colchester, the Rt. Revd Roger Morris.

John hopes to see as many of us as possible at the service. For catering purposes please let Meriel or Christopher know you plan to come or put your name on the list in church.

The Church Office at Myland will co-ordinate the overall numbers. The telephone number for the office is 01206 855040.

KEN ROGERS OBE

Our dear friend, Ken Rogers died on June 22nd, 4 days short of his 95th birthday. His wife, Veronica, died just 4 months previously and, after all the years that he had been supporting and looking after her it is very sad that he did not have a little more time. He was beginning to get his life sorted out at Freda Gunton Lodge where he was so happy. Sadly, just 4 days after I had had lunch with him, he had a major stroke from which he did not regain consciousness. After 4 weeks in hospital he came back to his home at FG Lodge where they nursed him so well for his final few days. His cousin Don, who was really his only family, along with his wife Heather and their daughter's, were with him at the end.

Ken had played a big part in our church life over 45 years. He was Magazine Editor, Sidesman and Lesson Reader. Even after he went into the care home he still arranged the church rotas for 2 years. He, along with Veronica, supported all church events.

We even held Study Groups at their home when they lived in Bury St Edmunds.

Our vicar, John, conducted a very warm and affectionate service for Ken at the Crematorium on 17th July. The picture, which always hung in the Rogers' home, was on display at the funeral along with his OBE and his war medals.

He was a lovely, kind and reliable man and I shall miss him enormously.

Ken had always been a great writer of verse. When he came to supper his thanks were always in the form of a rhyme. I thought I would reproduce a couple of his efforts. One he wrote, after Veronica's death, about his care home, which I think is amazing. The other is one he wrote many years ago when, unexpectedly, the vicar who was supposed to take our Evening Service was ill, and at the last minute, and I had to step in. This was before we ever took our own services so it was quite unusual.

WHERE?

An oasis in the middle of town
The care home that could wear a crown
The one whose carers really care
Whose residents love just being there.

Where could you find a better Home
To end your days when you're alone
Whose gardens are a sheer delight
To wander round from morn til night.

On rainy days there's books galore
With crosswords, quizzes and plenty more
Medical care, fine food, at the ring of a bell
Of course it must be FGL

BAPTISM OF JOSHUA PEARS

On Sunday July 14th Joshua Benjamin John Pears was baptised. He is the son of Nicola and Alexander Pears and grandson of Claire and Christopher Long-Price. He was quite delightful and smiled his way through his big introduction to the church. We send him, his parents and god-parents our love and best wishes.

This is their lovely card of thanks.

THE OUNATE - LARE VISIT

We had a special Evening Service on July 28th when Jane, Sena and their family came to update us on their mission work in France. They first mentioned that they had been back to Togo earlier this year – where they previously worked – and said that the church and school they established are doing well. In France, the work they are trying to do is hard and slow. There are few churches or worship teams. However they are reaching out to the community in Normandy with fellowship, hospitality, cooking, concerts, football and Alpha courses and a history group. They are trying to earn peoples respect and are having some results. They ran a very successful Music Day, Fete de la Musique, which they initially had difficulty in gaining permission for. In the end the Mayor attended and it was streamed live so they managed to reach out a great many people. They feel that friendliness and hospitality is the key to connecting with people. At the moment most of their church group are French Nationals, International students and refugees.

They thanked us for our support and asked for our prayers for a follow-up concert, more families to join them for worship, their worship team and their children's education.

Afterwards, over refreshments, we were able to chat further with them about their work.

COFFEE MORNING DONATION

We recently sent a cheque for £300 from several months of Community Coffee Mornings to Faith in Action. This is part of their letter of thanks.

Dear John,

Thank you very much indeed for your letter dated 28th June and for the extremely generous cheque for £300 which you enclosed with it.

You will already know about the cyclone and flooding which caused such extensive damage in the Lower Shire, as well as in other regions of East Africa, earlier this year. After these events it is so easy to become discouraged but the truth is that there are so many projects where we have seen wonderful progress. Knowing how prone so much of Africa is to poor rains and the subsequent destruction of property and loss of crops, our aim is to help communities to be less vulnerable and more resistant to these disasters. This, of course, needs to be done in both practical and spiritual ways.

Traditionally families have been so dependent on good rains which have so often failed them. Our aim is therefore to help communities to have alternative sources of income. You will probably already know many of the ways in which we have sought to do this. Just one example of a village where we have seen significant progress is Chakwapa Village, east of Blantyre. We have visited this village several times and have found a group of very motivated ladies who were making clay cooking stoves: a business that had been learned and set up through another organisation and which had already brought so many benefits to this community. The ladies involved in this project had formed a close-knit group through regularly meeting together to work and had already become highly motivated by the success of this business.

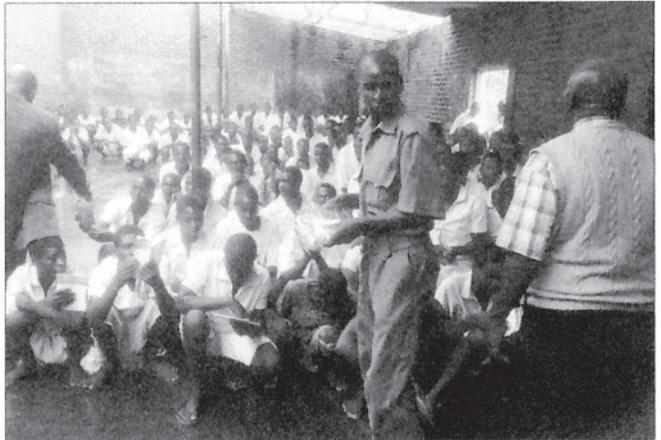

We have already described in recent news sheets how we initially asked if they would like to set up a briquette-making business in their village in order to provide a cheaper and more environmentally-friendly fuel for these cooking stoves. They said that they would and this was so successful that towards the end of last year, they asked if they could set up an eco-stove business in their village as the briquettes did not fit their clay cooking stoves well and the eco-stoves were far more environmentally-friendly.

We therefore sent £1,645 for setting up ten eco-stove businesses in this village at the beginning of the year. Dan Nkhandwe tells us that the ten ladies who received these businesses were extremely happy after they had been trained to make these eco-stoves and are very motivated to make these businesses succeed. They have also promised to encourage women in other villages to participate in this type of business. This is why we are so encouraged by the progress in this village: because these ladies are so highly motivated and successful, they will be able to motivate and encourage groups in other villages.

One very significant factor in the success of any project is whether communities expect to succeed or to fail. This is especially true in Africa because the continual devastation caused by severe weather conditions can result in families expecting all their efforts to provide food for themselves to fail.

We also continue to be encouraged by the many requests which we receive for more Bibles and Bible studies. We have provided over £6,000 for Bibles over the past 30 years and over 96,000 Bible studies have been distributed to Church congregations, army barracks and prisons. We are convinced that providing both congregations, soldiers and prisoners with Christian resources is extremely important, especially as so little is available in their locally spoken language, Chichewa. I know, from my own experience, that it is the evidence of God' presence working with us that encourages and sustains me though times of testing and difficulty. We also know that it is only by putting our faith and trust in God that we can experience true peace and security. We were therefore very encouraged when many survivors of the cyclone asked if they could have more Bible studies and in many cases made this a priority over much-needed practical help.

We would like to thank you once again for your very kind and generous gift and we would be grateful if you could pass on our thanks to all who gave so generously at your coffee mornings. We are so grateful for the very faithful support that we continue to receive from so many wonderful and generous people, without which we would not be able to achieve very much.

With very grateful thanks,

Sally Jeffree

ANNIE'S RACE FOR LIFE

Annie completed her Race for life in memory of her grandmother, Sandra Sherwood, Lizzie Bramall and her carer's son. This is what she wrote:

MERIEL

Hello,

The race went really well. Took me just over 3 hours to complete.

Race for life was always something I had always wanted to do and this year I made it happen. The journey to participate in the race was hard, I had a few small injuries to my knee but was still training despite all of this. To all the people that sponsored me, I am really grateful for all the support you have given. I did the race in memory of Lizzie Bramall and Sandra Sherwood. But along the path of training my family did get some bad news, my foster carer Tony - his son, David was diagnosed with stage 5 cancer. All the more reason to run and raise as much as I can. Thank you for all the support and I hope to do the race again next year!

Thank you!

Love

Annie xx

The de Horkesley wooden effigies

To the right of the door, on a large brick plinth are three recumbent effigies, reputed to be Sir Robert de Horkesley (d.1296), his eldest son Sir William de Horkesley (d.1332) and Sir William's wife, Emma (d.1333). The male figure nearest the wall is larger than the other knight. His armour is of a hauberk of mail descending almost to the knee, covering the arms. The head is protected by a close fitting hood of mail secured by a narrow fillet round the forehead. Chausses of mail cover the legs and feet and padded treads the thighs; the feet were armed with spurs. A long sleeveless surcoat, or jupon is folded back to expose the legs and is secured by a narrow girdle. A baldric supports a short sword in its scabbard. The hands clasp what may represent a heart. The shield, very broken, has no device. The head formerly rested on a lozenge-shaped pillow. Note the blackening of this head caused by its lying buried in the bombed ruins for many years, long after the other pieces had been rescued and taken to Colchester for safe keeping. The feet rest upon a lion whose head is turned away from the effigy. The right leg is crossed over the left just above the knee.

The second male figure is similar but the surcoat is open and turned back on one side from the belt downwards. The sword belt has largely disappeared but is wider than that of the first effigy. The sword has gone as have the arms below the elbow. The legs are similarly crossed except that they do so just below the knee. The head rested formerly on a lozenge shaped pillow, destroyed in 1940. The feet rest upon a lion whose head is turned upwards. Note that the camail, which is the portion of the mail protecting the throat, is beneath the jupon whereas on the other effigy the camail is over the jupon.

The female figure is dressed in a robe which fits closely to the bust but hangs in folds from the waist to the feet, and is partially covered by a short mantle, hanging from the shoulders and looped up at the elbows, terminating just above the knees. The head is covered with a wimple hanging down in pleats to the shoulders and secured by a fillet. The head rests on a square pillow. The arms below the elbow are damaged and the hands missing but were probably in an attitude of prayer. The feet rest upon two small dogs, lying tail to tail.

A drunk staggers into a Catholic Church, enters a confessional booth, sits down, but says nothing. The Priest coughs a few times to get his attention, but the drunk continues to sit there. Finally, the Priest pounds three times on the wall. The drunk mumbles, "Ain't no use knockin'! There's no paper on this side either!"

Eternity

There was a time
 When we would love forever
 When we stood up
 For all the world to see
 You took my hand
 As we knelt before the altar
 And in your heart
 You made a home for me

And in that time
 We gave our vows together
 We walked that aisle
 For all the world to see
 I took your hand
 As I stepped in your sunshine
 And in your eyes
 I found eternity

GRAND TOUR OF JAPAN

With Hong Kong extension

March - April 2019

Part 2 - By Gill McInnes

Day 4 – Sapporo to Hakodate

Not too much sleep because of jet lag and 6.30am breakfast after which, we left the hotel, complete with hand luggage, to walk to the Metro station, through the snow which had fallen overnight. Quite a difficult journey. On arrival there were lots of stairs and lots of people and not much time to get the train ~ On arrival another rush to the platform, with 31 people trying to keep together, was not easy. However we made it - just - and boarded our first bullet train, the Super Hokuto for the 3 + hours journey to Hakodate. It was a fascinating journey, a lot of it along the coast with lots of fishing villages as well as lots of industrial plants with tall chimneys and fairly dull 'kit' houses, with an occasional purple and mustard-coloured one, as well as some coloured roofs. The snow had been cleared but there were high, squared off, heaps of snow which looked as if they could remain all Summer.

On arrival at Hakodate, we had an hour for lunch - we used The Station Cafe - then we were off to The Fort of Goryokaku, built for the 'The Shogun' or the government, whoever won!! Bit difficult to remember who did! There were moats and beautiful gardens. We were just too soon for the cherry blossom but we saw the buds.

After quite a lot of walking we were taken to The Ropeway, a cable car, which took us to the top of Mount Hakodate. The sun was shining and we took our photos and walked round the observation building. It had been a long day and we would quite happily have gone to our hotel but the guide insisted we had to stay until the lights came on below, which meant we got to the hotel at 7pm, twelve hours after we'd left Sapporo.

Our hotel was very old fashioned and our room had a mattress on boards, very low and a bit tight for space, but fascinating, and the bed was very comfortable but quite difficult to get in and out of. The hotel did have a thermal pool but we decided sleep, however little, was best.

We then had to find somewhere to eat. The nearest one we could find was another Italian cafe where we were the only people - it only had seats for 12. A Gorgonzola and mushroom pizza was very tasty and then back to the hotel. In our room we found black satin pyjamas which 'could be worn out in the hotel' and white ones which 'could only be worn in the room'.

(Our first days were on Hokkaido, the most Northerly island of Japan, which had been fought for between the Japanese and the Russians - The Japanese won. Everything seemed low key. Lots of young people leave to go further south and apparently they are trying to attract more people).

Day 5 – Hakodate to Tokyo

Breakfast at 6.30am where there were huge queues and virtually every Japanese person was wearing the black pyjamas and orange mules. We felt out of place in our ordinary clothes.

We were to leave at 8am, with our hand luggage, to walk 1.2 kms to Hakodate station, via a market, predominately of fish. We chose to sit and wait! Then on to the Station where we got on a train for 20 minutes, then off to catch Tokyo train. Not easy, but we all got on the train. We left Hokkaido Island via a long tunnel and reached Honchu Island. Most of the journey it was raining and very dreary which continued for most of the way, but trains are quite comfortable and as we approached Tokyo we saw our first Cherry Trees in bloom - not many, but we could see it all around. On arrival in Tokyo we had to get on another Metro train - all of us going through the station following a Mini Mouse!! Not easy but we finished with the full complement of people, which is quite a feat. Not sure you would call it relaxation!!! BUT we're enjoying it. As I write this we're just back from going out for a meal- very local restaurant and very Japanese, which we ate with chop sticks amongst all the locals who were competent - we weren't, but we managed. Note - must practice! Unfortunately we got very wet on the way back to the hotel due to a very sharp shower.

Day 6 - Tokyo

Up with the lark and off on a coach tour of Tokyo and District. Very light traffic as it is Sunday morning. First stop a Buddhist Temple, where the cherry blossom was nearly out and the crowds were there to see it. Quite a lot of pictures taken including my favourite, a homeless person, who had a little snooze beside me, as our guide told us, in great detail, about the history. Unfortunately, my hip was often incredibly painful when just standing, so my concentration on the guide was rather limited!

Then we were off to The Imperial Palace Gardens, via a very posh Department store Food Hall, to buy lunch. On arrival, we took a very long walk past fortifications, built with huge chunks of stone, which jig-sawed perfectly. How they put into place we couldn't imagine.

We then arrived at a huge open space surrounded by trees, lots of them Cherry, luckily in flower, where masses of families were sitting on the grass having their 'cherry blossom' picnic. We joined them eating Sutchi with chop sticks!

Afterwards, driving through Tokyo, we saw huge crowds, complete with picnics, queuing to get into parks - whole streets were full of people. We then drove down a road, lined with trees, (difficult to believe we were in the middle of Tokyo) and arrived at a huge wooded area, only set 100 years ago. Each entrance was through a huge gate with, we were told, the largest unsupported wooden gateways in Japan, with gold sixteen-petal circles, representing Chrysanthemums.

The walk was lovely and when we arrived at the entrance to Meiji Shrine, the guide was delighted that a wedding was going on. The bride wore a white kimono, with a huge, high hat. Our guide told us tradition said the bride might have had horns and this would have covered them! I was fascinated by the footwear, white flip flops, worn over white socks - looked most uncomfortable. In the end we saw three weddings and bridal parties - each very different, the last bride being in red.

Then, after a long walk through the woods we found our coach and went back to our hotel, for a short time and then out to find dinner. We had been told of a park close by, which was lit at night, so off we set. Were we glad we went!! The whole small park, amongst high rise buildings, was surrounded by cherry trees, all in full bloom, with lanterns hung amongst them.

There was hardly a space on the grass which didn't have a family picnicking. In the centre was an ornamental lake, where every so often a water display happened, lit with lights of different colours. Lots of photos were taken. We were so lucky to be there as the cherry blossom was at its best.

THEN we had to find dinner. We found a small, very full, cafe, where we were sat at a small table, complete with lighted gas stove. We were presented with a computer. Interesting!!! All the things we liked the look of "out of stock" but we did manage to find the menu in English, although it didn't help us a lot. Eventually we ordered Meso of Crab followed by the arrival of a large saucepan of clams, which were plonked on the cooker, and then prawns in a sauce -all to be eaten with chop sticks! Luckily Jill had some idea about cooking clams! We did order beers which arrived a minute later. It was an interesting dinner BUT certainly not a balanced meal.

DAY 7 - Tokyo to Hakone

We had been told that we were going to the busiest Metro station in Tokyo where people were pushed onto trains to enable doors to shut. We walked to the station, with hand luggage, in the rush hour! 31 people following Mini Mouse again! Unfortunately, a train came in - not ours, except two of our people got on! Then, having had huge crowds get off the train, meant we were quite a way back from 'Mini' when I suddenly realised that our party were getting on! Unfortunately, I was stuck with the doors closing on me - my luggage was on but there was nowhere for my feet. I was pushed from outside - I think - he may have been trying to pull me off! Eventually I cleared the doors and was on. Scary!! But 12 stops later off we got (it had emptied a bit by then) and got onto a bullet train - The Romance Car - so called because way back, our destination, Hakone was a honeymoon destination, in the mountains.

On arrival, a bus was waiting which took us to Lake Ashi where we took a 25 minute ride to the other end and then onto the Ropeway, up a mountain to sulphur springs. It was snowing, then raining. The smell was of bad eggs! They were selling 'black eggs' in every guise. I guess because of that.

Back down the mountain we went onto a Sculpture Park with a Picasso Exhibition - very weird sculptures and the main exhibition was closed however an display of plates by Picasso was really interesting. Weather was not good and so we were pleased to get to our hotel, which was very Japanese. Shoes had to be taken off and put in lockers, before we crossed the threshold and the wheels of our cases were polished before they were let in.

Our room was big, with cushions on the floor round a low table - very traditional. We went by coach for a meal, which turned out was in a lovely house with the entrance up an outside, stone staircase. Very Italian, but the walls were painted with very Japanese paintings. It was a lovely evening - all the better that it was free because of odd things which had gone wrong. A really nice gesture.

Harry Potter Fans!

HOGWARTS SCHOOL, QUILT

RAFFLE

£1 PER TICKET

193cm x 193cm = (76" x 76") = (6ft 4" x 6ft 4")

I have made this large Harry Potter, Hogwarts School quilt to raffle to help raise money towards creating a Learning Garden for the ACCESS students at Thomas Gainsborough School.

If you love Harry Potter or know someone that does then please consider buying a raffle ticket for this great cause.

Call me, Suzanne on 07854 602633 for details on where to purchase tickets.

Draw will take place & the winner will be notified on Wednesday 18th December 2019
Just in time for Christmas!

All profits from the raffle of this quilt will be donated to Thomas Gainsborough School.
